IN RE SERVICE VERSION OF STAR SPANGLED BANNER

Doubtless as you are well aware, the new song books published by the commission on Training Camp Activities of the War Department, for use by the Army, Navy, and Marines, contain the Service Version of the Star Spangled Banner. The Commission has printed only the melody, and the accompaniment is given only in the new band books, these also having the Service Version. In our desire to assist in the standardization of this excellent version, we have published a folio edition for voice and piano and are pleased to send you under separate cover a complimentary copy.

Yours truly,
OLIVER DITSON COMPANY.

HISTORICAL NOTE

THE music to which The Star-Spangled Banner is sung was written by John Stafford Smith, an English organist and composer of prominence. He was born at Gloucester about March, 1750, and died in London, September 21, 1836. About 1775 Smith wrote the music for a convivial song to a poem by Ralph Tomlinson—To Anacreon in Heaven, which became well known as "The Anacreontick Song." Its popularity crossed the Atlantic and the melody was used in this country with various texts, the most widely sung being Adams and Liberty by Robert Treat Paine of Boston. This was first sung and published on June 1, 1798, and became very popular. When The Star-Spangled Banner appeared in Baltimore sixteen years later it was labelled "To be sung to the tune of Anacreon in Heaven."

The text of The Star-Spangled Banner was written by Francis Scott Key, a lawyer by profession, who was born in Frederick County, Maryland, August 9, 1780, and died in Baltimore, January 11, 1843.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

About September 12, 1814, Key, with the approval of President Madison, visited the Admiral of the British fleet in Chesapeake Bay to secure the release of his friend Doctor Beanes. This was granted but Key and his party were detained on board because of the intended attack on Baltimore. The patriot Key was thus compelled to witness the bombardment of Fort McHenry which began on the morning of September 13th, and lasted until the early hours of the 14th when "by the dawn's early light" he saw "that our flag was still there." The attack having failed, Key and his party were released and the fleet withdrawn. In the fervor of the moment Key sketched the lines of the song on the back of a letter and finished them after reaching Baltimore. They were printed in the Baltimore Patriot of September 20th, 1814, the Baltimore American of September 21st, and in a handbill struck off at the time.

Adams and Liberty, written by R. T. Paine, Esq. in 1798. The lyrics are: "Ye sons of Columbia, who bravely have fought, For those rights which unstain'd from your sires had descended, May you long taste the blessings your valor has bought, And your sons reap the soil, which your fathers de-

And ne'er may the sons of Columbia be slaves, While the earth bears a plant, or the sea rolls its waves.

A comparison of Adams and Liberty, given above, with The Star-Spangled Banner shows how the attrition of a hundred years has gradually changed
