Bill John-son left his lit-tle wi-fey dear,—
When Bil-ly reached that fo-reign bat-tle-field,—

To go a-way and fight,
He wrote a let-ter home,

She knew his pock-et-book was He asked his wife how she was kind-a low,— get-ting on —

But Bil-ly fixed that all right,
Since he had left her a-lone,

When she
When she asked him how she would pro-vide — As he kissed her "good-bye" he re-plied: — came to the end of his note — This is just what her lov-ing man wrote: —

Chorus Slow like "Blues"

The Gro-cer prom-ised to trust you, dear,— Wont have to pay him un - til next year,—

The Land-lord said you could keep the flat,— So don't you wor-ry 'bout that;—

But there is one thing I'll leave un-done,— I would-n't trust it to an - y - one,—

When I am miss - in' ——— To do your kiss - in' ——— Who'll love you while I'm gone,— babe? Who'll love you while I'm gone? ———
